PURSUIT OF SHADOWS.

Some Spiritual Manifestations Explained—Prof. Baldwin's Trick.

Baldwin, the spiritual exposor, is now astonishing Virginia and Carson. Baldwin's exposition is altogether too much of public property to be confined to his audiences, and deserves to be known in the broader sphere into which, through these columns, it is now introduced. It will not one whit detract from his entertainment, but rather give zest to it, and should awaken all the more of public interest in his labors to expose knavery and fraud, for after all the cleverest idea is only to be gained of these expositions by witnessing them, and description can but awaken appetite to be satisfied only by personal observation:

INDY BROS' BURSTING PAPER TRICK.

A bit of paper thrown upon the ground, at a wave of the hand or by being breathed upon, bursts into a flame. Explanation—it is moistened with a few drops of a solution, which on absorbing the oxygen of the air, ignites the paper. This is a dangerous compound, and is made of phosphorous, nitric acid, sulphur and water, in stated proportions.

WISE TO WATCH AND WATCH TO WINE.

From a pitcher of water wine-colored liquids are poured, then emptied back, become water-colored again, and by successive pourings take on various shades, alternating from wine-color to water. Explanation—it is accomplished by the dash use in the tumblers and upon the finger tips, of gallic acid, sulphate of iron, citric acid, soda and distilled water, each being used separately and with slight of hand dexterity.

A CANTER TRICK.

Handcuffed behind his back with leather wristlets and bound to a chair by chains therefrom, and by a chain about the neck to the cabinet, the medium in the cabinet rings a bell, strikes musical instruments, plays mouth harp—though gagged with a stick or pencil held between the teeth, while the balls are seen, as the cabinet opens, to fall to a point distant from him. Meanwhile the chair of the medium is seated to the floor and his legs are bound to the chair.

Explanation—The arms are pushed through the wristlets sufficiently for the hands to have considerable play, allowing the bells to ring, the gag removed, etc., and as the door begins to open the bells are not away and appear to the audience to be rambling around ringing in mid-air without human agency. The medium assumes a position on the chair which tightens the chains, but in the closing of the cabinet a relaxation of position permits the arms to be thrust down through the wristlets, while the neck chain does not prevent an elevation or depression of the trunk several inches.

THE PILLORY TRICK.

A woman places her hand and arms in three apertures in a cross beam, set upon an upright. Another beam with invisible hinges slants down and secures her hand and arms, after the style of the old-time pillory. A leather strap clasps a staple, and a United States mail lock, the key hole sealed and the key held by a comatose, fastens the thing securely. The cabinet doors are closed and in a few seconds hands appear at the apertures, bells are rung and noisy demonstrations made. The door being opened the woman is found to be free, while the pillory is still locked and sealed, and is so certified by the committee.

Explanation—On the pretense of not filling the lock and to make the wax adhere well, a bit of gummed paper is stuck over the keyhole and the seal burned on over this. The heat causes a blister in the paper. The woman's arm is pushed forward enough to peep off the seal, paper, etc. She then unlocks the pillory with a delicate pick, capable of opening any padlock. A bit of gum adhesive concealed in her mouth is used to fasten the seal to the lock, which now adheres so firmly that it can only be chiseled off.

A DARK SECRET.

A circle is formed, songs sung and the mysterious made solemnly awful. The medium is girded by either hand by sitters in the circle, but by plausible excuse and management, he has one seized him by the wrist only, while the other holds him by the hand of the same arm, thinking he has the other hand. Thus there is left one hand to ring bells, make the spirit touches, etc.

HOPE TRICK.

On Wednesday night slips of paper were distributed about, and auditors wrote questions thereon, retaining the papers. Subsequently Clara Baldwin was, with all the usual gesticulations, waved into a somnambulistic condition, and then she gave answers to the questions, and auditors stood up and declared that they had written questions suited thereto, and then sent them up, with their names attached, to be read aloud to the wondering crowd. Thus, Mrs. Baldwin, with many a shudder and shiver, and well simulated tremor and faint, told that "another" was happy, that "Hayes" would be elected (entering to local desires here), but the Democrats would capture the California Legislature at the same time (this to cast off the other prophecy), that Julius Caesar's spirit animated Sitting Bull, that "Mary's" lover was jealous, that it would rain in three days, etc., etc.

Explanation.—Baldwin glanced over many a shoulder and saw many a question. In an audience of 800 he could count on very many asking who would be next President, and of all those who swelled with the heat some would like to peer far enough into futurity to find out how long 'twould be before the cooling rains would come. Some would, be sure, to ask for the "Mother," gone to the far beyond, and some to solve the riddle of their "sorceress's soul."

Baldwin and an assistant are so entirely tied in the cabinet, the hands being bound at the wrist behind the back, and to the lower back rounds of the chairs. The ropes are knotted at the will of the committee. They are cords of half-inch diameter, close woven and flexible. They are bound so as to sink in the flesh, abrade the skin, and cause coldness and dissolution of the hands. The legs are bound likewise to the front legs of the chairs. The knots are sealed with wax. The cabinet doors are closed and in a few seconds hands are rung, horns are blown, tambourines are played and thrown out of the cabinet.

net, hands are shown and rumples made inside the cabinet generally. After a few seconds silence, the doors of the cabinet are opened, and the medium found bound as before, and the seal unbroken.

Explanation.—While the tying goes on the medium crosses the hands and straining upward, makes the cords appear to be at great tension. By reason of the strain and by contraction of the very soft and pliant hands they are drawn through, often to the severe damage of the wrists, and then the loops are loosened easily enough. By like contraction and straining, the hands are restored to the loops, and the medium is tied, apparently as before. A medium gets out of a hard tied loop easier than out of a loosely tied one, as the former is firm and more like an iron band, while the latter would cut the flesh and hold it. Experience proves that few can be tied by the wrists in such a manner as to prevent them freeing themselves after due training.

THE COAT TRICK.

While so bound, but with the hands in front, a coat is put on, and again, though sewed together at the breast and wrist, it is taken off, and on signal by the committee is thrown out of the cabinet.

Explanation.—The hands are released as before, only more easily now, and the coat put on. It is taken off after the sewing by being skinned over the head, after the manner of men generally with that cause of many curses—the underskirt. The operation begins instantly on one door of the cabinet being closed and is complete by the time the doors are buttoned, and the assistant walks away. Hence, on the signal being given, the coat is tossed over to the stage in the tenth part of a second, the audience fondly imagining it was pulled off in that inapprehensible space of time.

SEIZE ON SPRING TYING.

The medium enters the cabinet, and in thirty-five seconds is found tied hand and foot, the hands in front between the legs, and the cords cutting the flesh of the wrists.

Explanation.—The medium ties, by cross gartering his lower limbs, brings the loops up about his hands and by a twist constructs a knot which by the knees being drawn apart tightens, and consequently relaxes on the knees being approached to each other. This trick requires great skill and dexterity, and even when seen, is scarcely comprehensible, and might well be taken for the work of spirits.

THE HORN TRICK.

A medium bound in the cabinet has his mouth filled with wine, and yet a horn is blown, etc.

Explanation.—The horn is blown by being inserted in the nostril, and the trick may be classed among the studies of nosology—Item—professed people can not give this manifestation for manifest reasons, as in this case something more than check is required.

THE RING TRICK.

The medium produces a heavy iron ring, and hangs it on a peg in the cabinet. He has one of the committee sit in the cabinet with him, inciting him, and grasping both his hands. The cabinet is closed, and the committee feels the iron ring fall upon and encircle his arm, though he'd swear he held the medium's hand firmly all the while.

Explanation.—Victim places both hands on his knees, palm downward; medium strikes both of victim's hands sharply, and asks if he feels both of medium's hands.

As to how Katie, nee Clara, appeared all in white we leave the ladies to explain and the men to conjecture.

THE HANDCUFFS.

The release of his wrists from handcuffs Baldwin explained was done by using delicate steel implement like a watch spring, with which he pressed down the bolt of the lock by forcing the spring between it and the arm of the cuff.

THE PRIZE FIGHT.

In a prize fight between two miners on Tuesday at Coalville, Penn., Edward Warren was so severely beaten by his antagonist, Moore, that he died. Warren's friends then set upon Moore, fatally beating him. A general riot growing out of the affair occurred Wednesday night and several persons were seriously wounded.

THE PILLORY.

MACKAY-FAIR have commenced the construction of another tailings flume, to carry the slimes from the Consolidated Virginia and California mines to the Ophir mill, on the Carson river. The new flume will be eight miles long.

THE GOVERNMENT.

The Government has commenced suit against Frank Leslie, the great Reform Democratic Publisher to recover $100,000 in gold on the importation of paper passed through the Custom House at undervalue.

THE SALT-BOX.

SALT-BOX has made its appearance in Ogden and Camp Douglas to an alarming extent. The Mayor of Ogden has quarantined all the houses in which the disease exists. So many yellow flags are about that a panic prevails in the city.

THE SHIP RYDALHALL.

The ship Rydalhall was wrecked near Spanishstown, Cal., on the night of the 17th. Nine of the crew lost their lives, trying to reach the shore. The Captain is still on board and refuses to leave the vessel.

THE BELL.

NASH, whose proper name is D. R. Locke, has resumed his position as managing editor of the Toledo Blade.

to see if they alone were ensnared upon the virgin altar as the maiden's one earthly God. Calculating probabilities, dealing in generalities, starting the shores of possibility, and skillfully steering clear of risks, he got through with his chairoyance well, and bore his fainting wife from the stage to the green room, to laugh over the gullibility of the dear public.

KATIE KING.

The Katie King mystery was equally simple with all the others.

Clara Baldwin was tied about the neck by the handsomest man of the committee, and the strongest. He tied several knots and she was placed in the cabinet, the end of the rope passed through anger holes in the end of the box, and tied together on the outside, where the committee watched them closely to see that they did not move. Thus tied, Mrs. Baldwin sat bolt upright with her head close back against the wall of the cabinet. The doors were closed, and in a moment hands were shown, bells rang, and a regular hubbub kicked up. Then the lights were turned down, and faces appeared at the window of the cabinet. John King, the pirate in black whiskers and hooking eye-brows, with a gruff voice and a growl of words; Shylock the Jew, with hooked nose, and pendant beard; Hildebrand Montrose, the pot of the ladies, in his bawler hat, eyeglasses and blond leg of mutton whiskers; lastly came Katie King, with coquettish step and mincing words, as she swopt from the cabinet upon the stage, clad all in white, and her head in a chaste veil of filmy texture. The lights were turned on, the doors opened, and Mrs. Baldwin in her dark-gray silk pull-back, was found tied to the wall as before, in a cabinet elevated from the floor, and pronounced by the committee to be free from trap door or connection with the stage.

Explanation.—When she entered the cabinet, and the ropes were put through the wall, Baldwin quickly shut the door next to her, shutting her out from view. She instantly grasped the two ropes which the committee were about tying. She thus saved several inches of slack. While the lights were being lowered she rapidly loosened the knots and ran them down to the wall until the slack was transferred to her end of the rope, and through this loop she pulled her head and was free. Concealed either in her ears, or on the soles of her shoes, or beneath a brooch at her throat, she had small flesh-colored rubber sheets, rolled up into mere pellets. On these were painted most skillfully various faces of all classes and shades. These, inflated and held to the aperture, or others drawn over her own face laying play to the mouth, were the materialized spirits of the poor, in stilled dead and gone, and of the outraged characters born of Shakespear's marvelous genius.

To give a dissolving effect and make a face fade away into the awful mistiness of nothingness, one of the inflated faces grows less and less indistinct, dim and awfully shadowy as the air is allowed slowly to escape twist thumb and finger from the neck of the blown up rubber globe, after the manner of the American urchin, with those ear-torturing toys of rubber, which emit the squeak that drives peaceful bachelors to pray for another world.

As to how Katie, nee Clara, appeared all in white we leave the ladies to explain and the men to conjecture.

THE HANDCUFFS.

The release of his wrists from handcuffs Baldwin explained was done by using delicate steel implement like a watch spring, with which he pressed down the bolt of the lock by forcing the spring between it and the arm of the cuff.

Sheriff's ACCIDENT.—Little Charlie Jones, son of Sheriff Jones, came near meeting death last evening. He came over town on his pony, to do an errand, and returning the pony became frightened by the noise and clatter of three lanterns. Charlie was carrying and ran away with him, crossing the bridge at break-neck speed and ran like mad over the hill beyond Hatch's, finally throwing the boy into a huge pile of wood alongside of Hatch's fence, opposite Kinkead's. His right arm was broken at the wrist, his forehead was considerably bruised, and he received internal injuries, causing him to vomit blood. He is receiving the best of care and attendance, and we trust will soon be skipping around as lively as usual. Charlie is a promising youth, and bids fair to make as good, if not a better Sheriff than his father.

BENEFIT.—Remember the theatrical performance at the Reno Opera House this evening for the benefit of E. J. Crowell. An excellent bill will be presented.

MURKIN.—The jury in the case of Geo. DoLong returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter. He will be sentenced next Monday.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

RUMBLINGS OF THE COMING WAR.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 19.

The Russian Ambassador to Turkey returned to the city last night.

VIENNA, Oct. 19.

The newspapers publish intelligence from Athens that the Greek Government will submit to the Chamber of Deputies a proposal for calling out 60,000 men and demanding a credit of fifty million drachmas and authority to contract a loan of ten million.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

The troop ship Juniper left Portsmouth yesterday for India with 900 artillerymen and upward of 70 officers, surgeons, etc. She will embark another battery of artillery at Plymouth. The departure of troops from Woolwich for Portsmouth was witnessed by crowds. The excitement displayed was the greatest since the Crimean war.

The Times announces that the Juniper has been directed to call at Gibraltar and Malta for orders, in case circumstances should make it necessary, for the destination of her troops.

A war risk of five shillings was required yesterday by the Lloyds and the various insurance companies on British vessels trading between England, Austria and the East. No business is yet reported in the risks on Russian and Italian vessels, but the rates on these would of course be higher.

The rumor circulated yesterday, that the French Minister of Foreign Affairs is about to resign, to be succeeded by Count DeChambard, is to-day pronounced to be without foundation.

Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

The Stock Exchange this morning opened freer from the panicky feeling of yesterday, and most of the stocks are slightly firmer. Consols were at last night's closing prices; Russians and Egyptians, about one per cent., and Turkish fractionally higher; but Hungarians one per cent. lower.

The rumor, that the French Minister of Foreign Affairs is about to resign, to be succeeded by Count DeChambard, is to-day pronounced to be without foundation.
